

I learned a few things from this tutorials. First off, I did not know what a callback function was. During the videos, I was still was super confused as to why we kept using this term “callback” and putting it into our code. After researching it, I know understand what it is doing. It is the function that you pass a parameter into another to be called after doing the other tasks within that function!

I also learned how to call an API in JavaScript. I have done it in both React and JQuery, so it was interesting to see how the different syntaxes and techniques were used to be able to dynamically display data.
